FROM THE EDITOR

This issue of the CRIMSA Newsletter is quite a bumper issue in terms of lists of new articles and other publications and forthcoming conferences. It also contains the call for article submissions to the International Police Executive Symposium (IPES) Work-in-Progress Series (WPS). The editor of this newsletter has also been appointed as the South African focal point for collecting and editing any submissions. It also contains information and a call for papers for the CRIMSA Conference in August 2007. Members are asked to circulate this information as widely as possible (besides sending in their own paper abstracts as early as possible!!). CRIMSA now also has a new website dedicated only to CRIMSA matters. The previous SABINET supported website has been revamped to only reflect the business of and article archives of the Society's journal Acta Criminologica - although there will be links from this website to the new CRIMSA website which is also going to be supported and managed by SABINET.

Criminology and its allied disciplines are experiencing 'interesting times' to say the least. Public concerns at the high levels and violence of crime have led to various public and state initiatives to re-examine crime, its causes, risk factors and measures and strategies to combat this scourge. It therefore behoves all of us to become more involved and input research information into the various policy debates if we, as professionals, want in any way to influence outcomes in a more positive manner.

CRIMSA ANNUAL CONFERENCE AUGUST 2007

CALL FOR PAPERS

At their first EXCO meeting in December 2006 the CRIMSA Council made a principled decision to hold a conference with the view to making it an annual event in order to provide an opportunity for all criminologists and allied practitioners in the criminal justice system to gather and share new knowledge and expertise from the broader discipline. The Newsletter is proud to announce that this conference is now well under way and organisationally up and running by publishing the 1st call for papers

CRIMSA CONFERENCE 2007

Theme: Perspectives on Crime and Criminal Justice in Africa

Will be held at the Conference Centre, University of Pretoria, Pretoria, Gauteng, South Africa from Monday 27th to Wednesday 29th August 2007

The 2007 Criminology & Victimological Society of Southern Africa (CRIMSA) Conference aims to provide a crime and applied criminal justice research forum where academics, practitioners and researchers from the many disciplines that interact with the broader criminal justice system (such as police, court, prisons officials, private security officers, victims of crime counsellors, social workers, probationers, lawyers, prosecutors and all other allied practitioners (crime prevention, CPTED, rehabilitation programmes, policy formulation, etc.) can present, discuss and share knowledge, research findings, works-in-progress, practical work experiences and theorise about issues concerning crime and all other related aspects (a multidisciplinary approach is welcomed). Come and share your knowledge and experiences with a wider audience and use this opportunity to meet and network with people from other speciality criminal justice and criminology fields.

Abstract submissions: You are invited to submit an abstract of your intended paper presentation. As soon as your abstract has been received it will be submitted to the CRIMSA Scientific Committee for review and you will be notified of its acceptance/non-acceptance in due course.

Your abstract of at least 300 words (text body) (in MSWord) can be e-mailed to aminnaar@unisa.ac.za or faxed to fax2email no. 35RD ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE EUROPEAN GROUP FOR THE STUDY OF DEVIANCE AND SOCIAL CONTROL. 30 August- 2 September 2007. Willem Pompe Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, University of Utrecht, Utrecht, Netherlands

Revealing and challenging the relations of power are central processes in the development of critical analyses of 'crime', 'deviance', 'conflict' and criminal justice. In terms of structure this has involved critiques of advanced capitalism, globalization, neo-colonialism and patriarchy emphasizing political, economic and ideological contexts. In terms of institutions, and connected directly to the structural, is the administration of power through state interventions. Power is also significant in interpersonal relations, in families and within communities, in the local state and local economy. As critical analysis of harm and social justice has established, wherever power is imposed there is personal and collective resistance. For the most powerless however, like children and animals, resistance is not an option. The conference will explore these issues in the context of regulation and criminalization, inviting papers on any aspect of the theme.

Abstracts submitted by: 30 June 2007. Full Details: Philo van Lenning, European Group 2007, Willem Pompe Institute for Criminal Law and Criminology, Janskerhof 16, 3512 BM Utrecht, The Netherlands. Tel: 0031 30 253 7149 Email: P.vanLenning@law.uu.nl

CONFERENCE REPORTS

The International Institute for Restorative Justice (IIRP)'s eighth international conference, "The Next Step: Developing Restorative Communities, Part 2," in the IIRP's hometown of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, USA, October 18-20, 2006, was a big success, according to participant feedback. Significant conference trends included sessions on regions, organizations and schools that are taking the next step – building restorative communities. Also notable were presenters who came to share their instinctively restorative responses to personal tragedy. An article by Laura Mirsky provides an overview of the conference. To read the article, please go to: <http://www.iirp.org/library/beth06.php> To download the a PDF version of the article, please go to: <http://fp.enter.net/restorativepractices/beth06.pdf>

Crime statistics: An independent review carried out for the Secretary of State for the Home Office. November 2006. The main conclusions from this report were grouped as follows:

1. A shift in emphasis is required in the production and communication of crime information. The focus must shift from the publication, by the Home Office, of the aggregate national picture to a system of communication which encompasses local data at local level between police and their neighbourhood communities.

2. Both the scope and definitions of the national statistics that are produced need a radical overhaul. Significant groups of victims are not covered by current surveys and certain major current crime category definitions are confusing and misleading.

3. Governance, management and organisation of the police and Home Office environments in which crime statistics are produced and reported must be revised to provide the public with complete assurance of actual and perceived independence and integrity of the statistics.

CRIME VICTIMS INSTITUTE OF TEXAS. www.crimevictimsinstitute.org

The Crime Victims' Institute set up in 1995 with the intent to:

Complete and study information concerning the impact of crime on victims. Close relatives of deceased victims, guardians of victims and society; Use information compiled by the Institute to evaluate the effectiveness of criminal justice policy and juvenile justice policy in preventing the victimization of society by criminal acts; Develop policies to assist the criminal justice system and the juvenile justice system in preventing the victimization of society by criminal acts; Provide information based on the research of the Institute; Study the impact of crime on victims and survivors, their family members, and society at large.

In May, 2003 the Crime Victims' Institute of Texas (CVI) was moved from the Office of the Attorney General (Texas) to Sam Houston State University (now located in SHU's Criminal Justice Center). The Criminal Justice Center houses the College of Criminal Justice. Among the degree programs of the College of Criminal Justice is the Bachelor of Arts in Victim Studies. This is an inter-disciplinary degree involving the departments of Criminal Justice, Psychology, Health Education, Management and Marketing, Political Science, and Sociology, who collaborate to offer the Victim Studies Degree. The Bachelor of Arts in Victim Studies is designed to prepare students for careers as professionals in victim services delivery. Graduates will have a broad range of knowledge about victim services delivery, agency operations, inter-agency collaboration, direct victim services, traumatology, and criminal justice procedures. Graduates will also possess an understanding of the special needs of crime victims, a fundamental understanding of the victim experience, basic management principles of service delivery, and basic legal principles as they apply to service delivery. Within the Criminal Justice Center are also housed the:

Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas (LEMITE); Correctional Management Institute of Texas (CMIT); Office of International Criminal Justice (OICJ); Institute for the Study of Violent Groups; Criminal Justice Educators of Texas; Office of Law Enforcement Training; Police Research Center; Survey Research Program; Texas Police Corps; Texas Regional Community Policing Institute.

IPES WPS NEWS

THE INTERNATIONAL POLICE EXECUTIVE SYMPOSIUM (IPES) WORKING PAPER SERIES (WPS): Call for Papers

The IPES Working Paper Series is a new forum for the international community of police experts, researchers, and practitioners. It intends to contribute to worldwide dialogue and information exchange in policing issues by facilitating the access to the global public sphere to the members of the community. Manuscripts will be reviewed and selected for publication by a multicultural team of editors. Authors will be offered a quick process of approval. By essence, the Series will be pluralist in outlook. It will publish contributions in all fields of policing and manuscripts will be considered irrespective of their theoretical or methodological approach. The Series welcomes in particular contributions from countries of the South and countries of the universe with limited access to the Western public sphere. The Series will be in English language and downloadable free of charge from the main IPES website (www.ipes.info).

Editorial Board: Members of the editorial board are Dominique Wisler (editor-in-chief, Khartoum, Sudan), Rick Sarre (professor of Law and Criminal Justice at the University of South Australia, Adelaide), Kam C. Wong (associate professor and chair of the Department of Criminal Justice of Xavier University, Ohio), and Onwudiwe Ihekwoaba (associate professor of Administration of Justice at Texas Southern University).

Editorial Line: The Series publishes in priority research work in progress and papers or reports offering background and practical information on policies, best practices, and police organization and reform. Pluralist in outlook, the Series welcomes manuscripts from various disciplines such as history, sociology, criminology, political and administrative sciences or law. Acknowledging that the language is a barrier, the language of the Series is “practical” English. Exceptionally, editors or National Focal Points (see below) may offer some support in editing the final version of the manuscripts. Practical guidelines to authors for the submission of manuscripts are available on the webpage of the Series.

Submission Process: Manuscripts (see instructions to authors) are formally approved by the editorial board - a multicultural team composed of policing experts - through internal review. The editorial board is supported by a network of National Focal Points whose function is described below. Authors are offered a quick approval process - not exceeding 15 days - designated to allow a rapid release of research data and information. Manuscripts can be sent electronically to the editorial board (wisler@coginta.com) or any of the National Focal Points.

Copyrights: Copyrights remain with authors. IPES Working Paper Series provide authors an opportunity to share research results early before they appear in final form in book format or scientific journals elsewhere.

National Focal Points: To achieve its aim, the IPES Working Paper Series is establishing a world-wide network of national focal points (NFP). NFP are well established scholars and experts in the area of criminal justice, criminology or sociology of policing in their country of origin. They have privileged knowledge and contacts with their national police institution and police professionals. As NFP, their role is to help IPES and the Series reaching their ultimate goal to become a global platform for dialogue on policing issues and the exchange of research data, best practices and policies for the benefit and enrichment of the police profession. NFP play a key role in promoting the IPES Series within their country, identify key contributions and encourage members of their national community of experts, researchers and practitioners to submit formally manuscripts to the editors of the Working Paper Series. Once the editorial standards for the Series will be firmly established, the NFP will be commuted into local editorial boards with authority to approve manuscripts for the Series.

Emails of National Focal Points (see IPES website).

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

INTERNATIONAL STOCKHOLM PRIZE IN CRIMINOLOGY: Winners for 2007: Alfred Blumstein of the Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh and Terrie E. Moffitt at the University of London. They are being awarded the prize for their pioneering research into the development of criminal behaviour (longitudinal research into the factors that lead people to commit crime).

SELLIN-GLUECK AWARD: Peter Grabosky (professor in the Regulatory Institutions Network (RegNet) at the Australian National University) was presented with the Sellin-Glueck Award of the American Society of Criminology for International Contributions to Criminology at the 3 November 2006 ASC conference in Los Angeles. In the 1990s Professor Grabosky made path-breaking contributions to regulatory theory and policy analysis. Many of these were about "third-party policing". This work asked how public goods like security and environmental stewardship are co-produced by state and civil society actors.

RESEARCH ON IMPROVING POLICING FOR WOMEN AWARD: On 26 October 2006 Dr Abby McLeod was presented with the Monash University Criminology Excellence in Research on Improving Policing for Women Award. The award seeks to recognise the importance of quality research in the advancement of policing and how it can better respond to women. Dr McLeod has a distinguished research record on policing in Melanesia, particularly Papua New Guinea. She is a member of the State, Society and Governance in Melanesia Project at ANU.

EUROPEAN AND INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH GROUP ON CRIME, SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY, AND ETHICS IN EUROPE, RUSSIA, AND USA (ERCES)

New research centre: ERCES & Research Partners are proud to announce the creation of a new research center which will expand on activities by diversifying focus to face new challenges with innovative approaches. For more information see: <http://www.erces.com/scrae>

THE TILLEY AWARDS: 2006: The Tilley Awards are named after Professor Nick Tilley of Nottingham Trent University, who has carried out considerable work in the UK, often commissioned by the Home Office, to develop problem-oriented policing (POP). They are funded by the Home Office Crime Reduction and Community Safety Directorate and were set up in 1999 to encourage and recognise excellence in crime reduction using problem-oriented partnership principles. As such, the awards have very close links to problem-oriented policing approaches. Appropriately, the awards are presented at the National POP Conference. The winners of the Tilley Awards 2006 were announced on 5th September at the UK POP Conference. The were as follows:

Winner: Operation Sea Quest: In the aftermath of the Morecambe Bay tragedy, Lancashire Police began Operation Sea Quest by establishing an action group with members from a variety of agencies - ranging from the Sea Fisheries Committee to the Coast Guard to the Department of Work and Pensions. The group then used an intelligence-led, cohesive approach to develop safe practices for cockle-harvesters. This has meant significant improvements to the safety of those working on the cockle beds, and to the quality of life for the local community.

Runner-up: Operation Jupiter: The Avon and Somerset Constabulary and the North Somerset Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership worked together on Operation Jupiter, addressing significant public concern about poor quality housing, and referrals from outside North Somerset for drug/alcohol rehabilitation treatment. No single organisation was responsible for these issues, so the team developed a problem profile in consultation with the Crime & Disorder Reduction Partnership. The police intelligence unit coordinated multi-agency data, analysed intelligence, presented a strategic overview and developed recommendations. A series of multi-agency tactics were developed to tackle problems, including visits to problematic premises and the cross-agency exchange of intelligence. The result was a 31% reduction in demand for the emergency and local services and a 6% reduction in crime.

Runner-up: Reducing Street Drinking: The Southwark/Camberwell Green Safer Neighbourhood Team used a cross-agency approach to deal with its longstanding problem with street drinkers. The problem had worsened over the course of years, increasing from a few street drinkers on the benches in Camberwell Green into threatening groups of 50 congregated in busy areas. The community wanted the problem tackled once and for all, so the team aimed for a long-term solution to anti-social behaviour related to the street drinking. Working with Southwark Council Community Safety, the police arranged for new protocols between the various agencies to help them exchange information. Individual drinkers were 'case conferenced' and their specific needs (housing, health, mental, etc) addressed. A process of escalating enforcement, including anti-social behaviour orders was supported by primary care trust and local authorities. The result was a nearly 90% reduction in the number of street drinkers.

Special Award: In addition to the main prizes, a special award was given to Hampshire Constabulary for its Operation Mullion. This operation targeted Mayfield School - the largest secondary school in Portsmouth, which suffered from persistent anti-social behaviour and had more reported crimes in a year than all the other schools in Portsmouth combined. Operation Mullion set out a long-term plan to address the problem through Hampshire Constabulary's Problem Resolution In a Multi-agency Environment Strategy (PRIME). Using guidance given from the Government's Safer Schools Partnership and the Association of Chief Police Officers paper on National Crime Recording Standards, they were able to work with students and involve the community and local media in addressing the school's problems. As a result they lowered mobile phone thefts by 95%, and criminal damage and vehicle crime by 100%.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

MONASH UNIVERSITY SOUTH AFRICA is wholly owned by Monash University, Australia and is registered by the Department of Education as a private higher education institution under the Higher Education Act of 1997. Monash is Australia's largest university with over eight campuses – including six in Australia, one in Malaysia and one in South Africa. It also has international centres in the UK and Italy. Monash has an outstanding reputation as a global leader committed to high quality teaching and innovative research. It was recently rated number 33 in the world in The Times Higher Education Supplement: World University Rankings. Monash South Africa is situated in Ruimsig, a suburb north-west of the Johannesburg city centre. The focus is on academic excellence and the small tutorial classes enable lecturers to provide students with personalised teaching and individual attention. The Criminology and Criminal Justice section was established in 2005, and it is anticipated to role-out a full suite of electives by the end of 2007 for students wishing to major in Criminology and Criminal Justice studies. It has proved to be a very popular course, drawing also students from faculties such as Commerce or Information Technology. Presently, Dr Robert Peacock heads the section, with Ms Pearl Dastile as a very popular lecturer amongst the students. Further appointments will be made soon. For further information Dr Robert Peacock can be contacted via email at: robert.peacock@arts.monash.edu
